History (BA)

The study of history aims to promote a broader, more critical understanding of the world and our place in it, to give students the ability to contextualize events in the present by distinguishing them from past times and places, and thus to provide the basis for making informed decisions in the public sphere. While the interpretive and communication skills students develop as History majors will be of value to them in their work lives, the History major aims at humanistic understanding rather than specific vocational ends. Because the term "history" refers to both the object of study (the human past) and to the discipline by which we claim to know that past, the History major at the University of Texas at Dallas aspires to both expansive knowledge of the past, achieved through breadth and distribution requirements, and critical assessment of the means by which historians reconstruct and interpret the past, emphasized in the required Historical Inquiry course, the disciplinary focus requirement, and the research project undertaken in the Senior year.

Students who complete the major in History may design distinctive degree programs by selecting among courses in a range of geographical areas, time periods, approaches to the study of history, and topical subject matters. Students are encouraged to focus their work in History on a particular time or place, significant theme, topic, or problem, and to balance breadth and range of historical study with depth in a particular subject. Students may also be certified to teach history and/or social studies.

Since the following catalog course descriptions are very general, students are urged to consult the detailed course descriptions available on the website for the School of Arts, Humanities, and Technology. At least one-half of the semester credit hours for a major must be taken at UT Dallas.

Most upper-division courses in History are open to all students in the University who have met lower-division core requirements.

Major Distribution and Elective Courses: 30 semester credit hours

30 semester credit hours of upper-division HIST courses are required beyond the Major Core Courses. These courses must meet the following distribution requirement:

Major Distribution Courses:

Select any 3 upper-division semester credit hours from 3 of the following 5 geographical areas (9 hours)

- East Asian History
- European History
- Latin American History
- Middle Eastern History
- North American History

Select 3 upper-division semester credit hours from each of the following disciplinary focus areas (12 hours)

- Gender and Women's History
- Race and Ethnicity
- Intellectual History
- Pre-1500 History

All courses will be designated with the geographical and disciplinary focus areas they cover. The same course may be used to meet no more than two distribution requirements. No double counting of courses will reduce the requirement that students must take a total of 30 semester credit hours of upper-division HIST courses in addition to the major required courses.

In addition, in order to achieve depth students will be required to take a second linked course in any one geographical or disciplinary focus area that they have used to fulfill the distribution requirements above.

Research-Focused Course:

All 4000-level HIST courses have a focus on historical research. Select at least 3 semester credit hours of HIST courses at the 4000-level. Note that HIST 4390 History Capstone Project requires students to further develop a research project begun in a prerequisite 4000-level course taken in a prior semester. Make sure to choose 4000-level course(s) in the area you wish to focus on for your capstone project.

It is recommended that you take a variety of 4000-level HIST courses.

Major Elective Courses:

Once meeting the requirements above, students will take between 3-15 additional semester credit hours of HIST electives, for a total of 30 semester credit hours.

Major-Related Courses: 6 semester credit hours

Select 6 semester credit hours of major related upper-division electives from the following list of courses:
